

Justin Trudeau is Not the Leader Canada Needs

The major media seem fixated with the new media darling, Justin Trudeau. Trudeaumania has risen anew.

However, Justin is not Pierre.

Pierre Elliot Trudeau stood up to the FLQ “bandits”. “There are a lot of bleeding hearts around who just don’t like to see people with helmets and guns...It’s more important to keep law and order in this society.”

Just like Pierre Trudeau in his time, Stephen Harper stands up against today’s terrorists. This is evident in Mr. Harper’s comments regarding the Boston bombing. The response is to “condemn it categorically, and to the extent you can deal with the perpetrators you deal with them as harshly as possible. And that’s what this government would do if ever faced with such actions.”

Justin Trudeau, on the other hand, took the view regarding the Boston bombing that we need to examine the root cause of terrorist acts “because there is someone who feels completely excluded...and our approach has to be, where do those tensions come from.”

Terrorists are terrorists and we need a leader with the intestinal fortitude to stand up to them. Leaders don’t mollycoddle terrorists. Justin Trudeau is not the leadership material Canada needs.

Whether you agree or disagree with Pierre Trudeau’s policies and economics, he stood for law and order. Stephen Harper does too.

Justin Trudeau is more likely to follow in Neville Chamberlain’s footsteps and cede to the terrorists’ demands and actions.

Justin Trudeau is not in the same league as Winston Churchill, Pierre Trudeau or Stephen Harper.

~ Andrew Carson