

The Coming Trudeau Autocracy

Justin Trudeau demonstrated his true attitude toward the idea of a “more democratic” government.

When the topic of abortion and pro-choice came up on May 14, 2014, Trudeau clearly stated that anyone who wants to participate in his government must agree absolutely with his position and be pro-choice.

Where is the openness for dialogue when the leader of the Liberal Party has an exclusionary mindset? He doesn't need more MPs. He needs clones of himself to maintain unanimous opinions on all issues.

It doesn't matter what your personal view is on the abortion issue, whether pro-life or pro-choice. That is not the issue.

The public's concern should be the self-evident closed minded attitude of the man who wants to lead this nation; a man who wants liberal drugs laws encouraging marijuana usage, liberal to lax screening of would-be immigrants coming to Canada from regions with known extremist and violent views and liberal spending of Canadian tax dollars.

We need a government and a leader of that government who will let caucus members express divergent opinions, who will open immigration doors while screening out undesirable extremists and violent people and who will maintain a balanced budget.

We need Stephen Harper and the Conservative Party of Canada.
